

If Strike Isn't Settled Quickly, It May Last a While

Health professionals all across our home and native land are striking. Striking for one thing and one thing only; the right to carve soap. This right was cruelly and unlawfully taken away by the Conservative Government and soap carving nurses and doctors are fighting back. Since their success in 2010, the Conservatives have banned soap and destroyed all soap carving historical evidence that has ever existed. But in the minds and hearts of Canada's beloved people lies that history, soap's history. Soap carving was passed down for generations and that connection has now been stripped away from us. One nurse at the Cantwhistle General Hospital has this to say; "I used to carve soap every day, my grandfather taught me the benefits when I was young and I knew that my life would never be the same. My life was dramatically altered and I had been using soap carving as a therapeutic method for my patients until the law changed."

Unfortunately medical workers may have to strike for a long while more, the Government is not letting up on this law and is being their usual stubborn self. So what are these passionate health professionals going to do? They are going to persist in their endeavours and proceed with their strike. They have refused to go to work and are picketing outside of their workplaces. Our crazy government needs to realize that by allowing this protest to go on they are robbing their citizens of their health. Hundreds of injured and sickly people are lined up outside hospitals everywhere. And where is our government? Probably playing dolls inside their little Parliament building while their people suffer. Come on Conservatives, we knew you didn't care about the working class but this? This time, you've gone too far.

Caris Nickerson